With tax season about to hit full swing, now's the time to ask clients for a five-star Google review for your firm. Asking clients for reviews can feel awkward. In general, though, people love to brag about great customer service. They might just need a little reminder to do so.

This Forbes article states why. "Statistics show that 92% of business-to-business (B2B) buyers are more likely to purchase after reading a trusted review, and displaying five product reviews can increase conversion rates by 270% compared to having no product reviews."

Why ask?

businesses are as helpful as product reviews on sites like Amazon.

- According to BrightLocal, 98% of consumers read online reviews for local businesses.

Asking for Reviews

If you want reviews on Google, the process is pretty simple.

1. Go to your Business Profile. [How to find your profile.]
2. Select Customers, then Reviews, and then Get more reviews.
 1. Tip: On your computer, using Google Search, select Ask for reviews.
3. Share the link with your customers directly or use the sharing options provided.

There are many other ways to ask for reviews, including:

- In person or over the phone.
- Through your website on a reviews page.
- Blast emails distributed quarterly; plus, add a link in email signatures.

Scenarios You Might Have

When a client expresses praise, thank them for it, and ask them to write a review for your services. Then, provide instructions. Tip: Create it as an email draft that you can copy/paste and send to them.

Example – Phone Call

Client: Sings your praises

You: That's really great to hear. Our team tries its best to help our clients. Thanks for taking the time to provide feedback. In fact, would you be willing to post a five-star review on Google? It really helps us ask for a review in an email blast or personalized from your own account (by saving a draft message that you can customize). Be sure to involve staff in this effort as well. Stress the importance of customer reviews and how their assistance contributes to the firm's overall growth.

Here is an example.

Hi [first name],

As an existing client, we want to hear from you about our services.

Would you mind writing a quick five-star review on Google? A few sentences is all it takes!

It enables us to continue providing the best experience possible for you. It also helps others understand how our firm and its team can make your lives easier.

Reviews also help us with your needs while helping others to make confident decisions about our services.

Including a request to leave a review on your website can be as simple as creating a form-field page and adding that page to the top navigation. Once reviews are approved, they can be posted on the testimonials page. You can also include a review button that links to Google. Be sure to monitor reviews in case there are comments
