joined the PwC Chief Auditor Network within its National Quality Organization where he advised audit engagement teams across the country on auditing methodology and best practices. In this role, Yujuico assisted with the execution of audit quality initiatives and facilitated accounting and auditing training. He most recently held a technical accounting role at a Fortune 500 financial services company where he helped lead complex implementations of accounting standard updates issued by the Financial Accounting Standards Board.

“It’s an incredible time to join AuditClub in its mission to make accounting and auditing better,” says Yujuico. “I believe the AuditClub model to be a perfect solution to the most important needs of today’s CPA firms and companies. AuditClub member firms enjoy high-quality audit services with the fractional flexibility to access the talent they need to succeed. It’s a model clearly designed for the future of auditing, and I’m excited to be a part of it.”

AuditClub also recently welcomed new senior crew member Sharon Gyesi. Gyesi is a certified public accountant licensed in Georgia and Washington, D.C., and also holds a practice license from the Institute of Chartered Accountants, Ghana. She has six years’ experience as an assistant manager with a Big 4 firm. In her new role Gyesi will provide audit and assurance services to members while coaching junior crew members, a talented group of high school and college students in the inaugural class of AuditClub Academy.

“Our mission to make accounting and auditing better started with the auditors-as-a-service model,” says Chris Vanover, CEO and chief auditor at AuditClub. “Our drive for continuous innovation has led to the creation of AuditClub Academy, a program designed to accelerate professional development for accounting students, and AuditClub One, an assisted entrepreneurship model offering a unique and alternative career opportunity to experienced auditors. The AuditClub vision and our commitment to transform the employee experience resonates with talented, motivated CPAs, and we are fortunate to have Brian, Sharon, and our first-ever class
