Fortune also looked at the one-year enrollment growth of each program (15%) and partnered with Ipsos to survey 2,500 business professionals and hiring managers to produce a measurement of the “brand appeal” of the college, or “how much a group of people want to recruit from the university” (10%).

Based on that data, Fortune ranked the top 11 online master’s in accounting programs for 2023. Here are the best-of-the-best programs this year:

1. University of Texas-Dallas
2. University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill
3. University of Massachusetts-Amherst
4. SUNY Polytechnic Institute, Utica, NY
5. Northern Illinois University, DeKalb
6. North Carolina State University, Raleigh
7. Syracuse University, Syracuse, NY
8. Keiser University, Fort Lauderdale, FL
9. University of Scranton, Scranton, PA
0. Ohio University, Athens
11. Colorado State University–Global Campus, Aurora

“To eventually land a role in senior management, you need to be well-versed in technology, and master’s degree programs in accounting are incorporating more analytical components to help prepare future business leaders,” said Douglas Boyle, an accounting professor and the PhD accounting program director at the University of Scranton. “That’s what a master’s of accountancy provides because accounting is really transitioning and is one of the leading professions on implementing analytics.”
