The San Francisco 49ers will pick a little later in the fourth round this year and will forfeit a fifth-round selection in the 2025 NFL Draft after being penalized by the NFL for payroll accounting errors at the close of the 2022 league year.

of the club's cumulative player compensation, NFL spokesman Brian McCarthy said in an email. "The NFL determined that the club would have remained under the salary cap at all times regardless of the error and there was no intent to circumvent the cap."

The 49ers have 10 selections in this year's NFL Draft, starting with the No. 31 overall selection in the first round. They have three picks in the fourth round, including No. 124, which they received from Dallas in exchange for quarterback Trey Lance, and two picks in the sixth round.
